How Sport Can End
Sexual Violence in
ONE GENERATION

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

NOVEMBER 2017

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY: HOW SPORT CAN END SEXUAL AND DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IN ONE GENERATION

For the purposes of this report and in order to examine sport as a complete system, we define sport as all facets of the sport pipeline: any youth, high school-age, college-age or professional sport organization, league, or association working at the local, state or regional, and national level that implements or supports one or many sport programs.

Sport is uniquely positioned to support and model healthy relationships, values, and norms that can reduce, and end, sexual violence (SV) and domestic and dating violence (DV) within the sport system. Additionally, sport's significant influence on culture could lead to shifts in social norms, attitudes and beliefs about SV/DV. This suggests that by engaging sport as part of the solution, we could create a climate and culture that can end sexual and domestic violence in one generation.

WHY SPORT?

Sport is a system that develops and influences millions of people throughout their lifespan. The sport pipeline starts with children who participate in youth sports and then continues as they move through middle and high school athletics to more competitive collegiate and professional sports, which are also followed by millions of spectators of all ages. Therefore, sport has an important role and powerful opportunity to reflect and shape the values of the greater society, including those related to preventing SV/DV.

CONNECTION TO SEXUAL AND DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

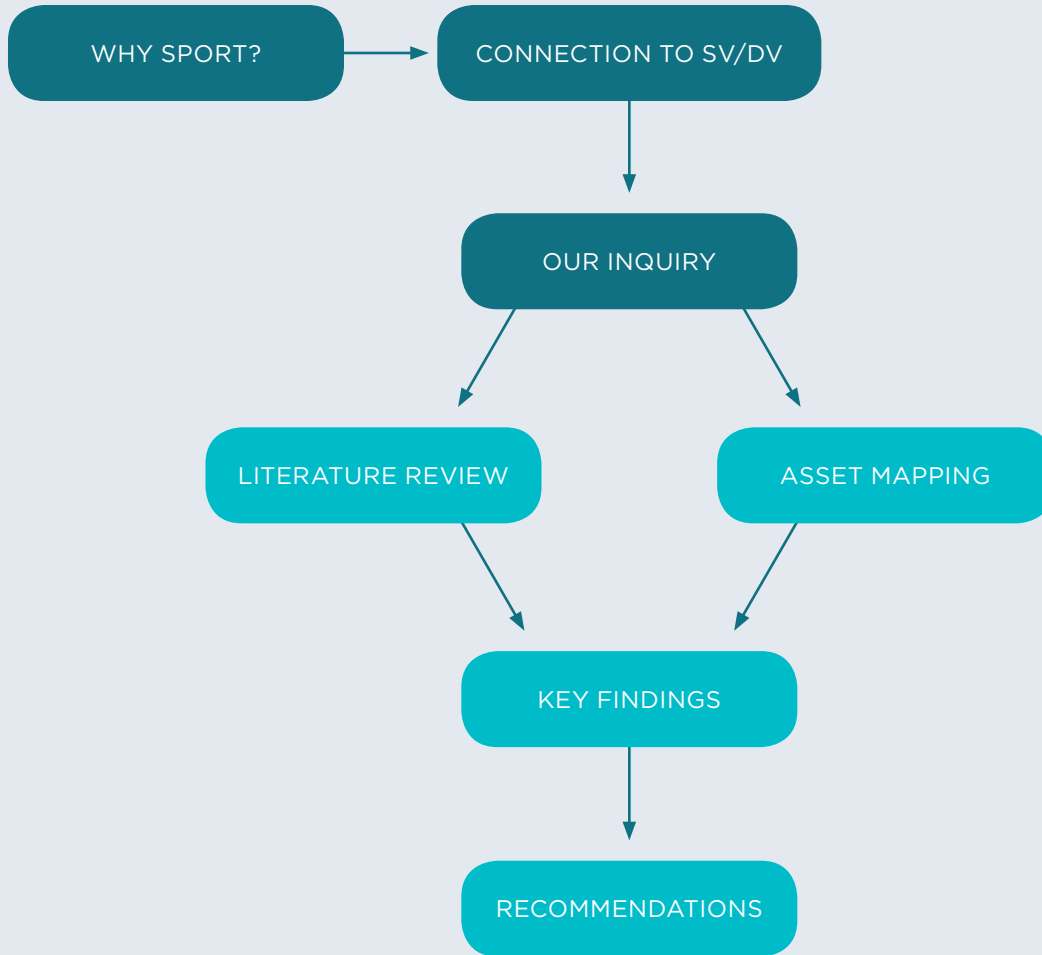

Sexual and domestic violence (SV/DV) is a pervasive problem throughout the United States, with 1 in 3 women and 1 in 6 men experiencing some form of sexual violence in their lifetime.¹ Sport systems can contribute to the problem of SV/DV and can also be part of the solution in preventing SV/DV. Sport can contribute to SV/DV by supporting climates and cultures that accept and condone SV/DV.² Recently, sport has attempted to shift this paradigm by engaging as a powerful part of the solution to prevent SV/DV, including raising awareness and reinforcing positive values.

OUR INQUIRY

Raliance is a national partnership dedicated to ending sexual violence in one generation. Raliance's activities include funding local grants, shifting media messaging on SV, influencing national and state SV policy, and leveraging SV prevention efforts. Given sport's role as a development system and key cultural influencer, Raliance has identified sport as a crucial sector to advance prevention of SV/DV.

Raliance has engaged in a multi-pronged strategy to explore how sport shifts the paradigm from contributing to the problem of SV/DV to being part of the solution to end it. In this inquiry, Raliance identified opportunities for sport to play its most powerful role as both an avenue to prevent SV/DV within its own system and a platform to spread values to end SV/DV in broader society. This report presents findings from those efforts.

LITERATURE REVIEW

We completed a comprehensive review of the peer-reviewed research on sport and SV/DV and concluded that addressing and preventing SV/DV in sport requires organizational change through a multi-level approach to:

1. Promote gender equitable attitudes and behaviors;
2. Build on SV/DV prevention throughout the sport pipeline;
3. Improve response to SV/DV;
4. Develop healthy, respectful people and communities.

ASSET MAPPING

We interviewed 49 experts in or working with sport at the local, state or national level to address or prevent SV/DV and concluded that SV/DV prevention in sport could be advanced by:

1. Engaging in a multi-level approach;
2. Connecting SV/DV prevention efforts throughout the sport pipeline;
3. Aligning around common standards;
4. Tapping into inherent strengths of sport.

KEY FINDINGS

Based on the research conducted, Raliance identified 3 key findings :

1. Sport's role in ending SV/DV is to activate as both an AVENUE and a PLATFORM for change;
2. Sport has internal and external strengths that can be built upon to advance SV/DV prevention;
3. There are specific gaps in sport where opportunities exist to advance SV/DV prevention.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Based on the information gathered and themes that were generated in the content analysis, 4 recommendations emerged:

1. Strengthen Connections Throughout the Sport Pipeline – We recommend consistent approaches across sport to shift the culture in and through the sport community to prevent SV/DV.
2. Team Up – We recommend alignment across fields (sport and SV/DV) to build credibility and gain insight from both sport and SV/DV experts. We recommend formalized sport-SV/DV partnerships.
3. Train Champions – We recommend individuals and role models in sport support a sport culture free of SV/DV. Therefore, training and support for individual champions in the sport community is recommended.
4. Build On Current Strategies – We recommend sport and SV/DV prevention experts build on and enhance current SV/DV prevention efforts already being implemented across the sport pipeline.

ROADMAP

Based on these recommendations, Raliance has developed a ROADMAP – a theory of change that illustrates how ending sexual and domestic violence in one generation can be realized in and through sport and identifies specific steps toward achieving this goal.

PREVENTION DATABASE

Based on these recommendations, Raliance has developed a PREVENTION DATABASE – a catalogue of over 100 strategies currently being implemented throughout the sport pipeline to prevent sexual violence and domestic violence.

VISION

Values, norms, and behaviors are taught and reinforced throughout the sport pipeline to cultivate and support healthy individuals, teams, and communities.
